Administrative history / Biographical sketch

Note

The Scottish Board of Customs was established following the Act of Union of 1707. In 1722 it was replaced by a single Board of Customs (9 Geo. I c.21), but some commissioners continued to reside in Edinburgh for the transaction of Scottish business. In 1742 an independent Scottish Board of Customs was re-established but was again replaced in 1823 by a unified board for the United Kingdom (4 Geo. IV c.23). Certain powers were delegated to a subordinate board in Scotland which was formally abolished in 1833 (3 & 4 Will. IV. c.51).

The administration of excise in Scotland after 1707 was entrusted to Commissioners appointed in 1723. The administration of salt duties, however, was the responsibility of the Scottish Commissioners of Customs until 1798. In 1823 the administration of the excise throughout the United Kingdom was entrusted to a single board, certain powers being delegated to a subordinate board in Scotland (4 Geo. IV c. 23). The constitution of this subordinate board was modified in 1829 (10 Geo. IV c. 32) and it ceased to function in 1830. In 1849 the Board of Excise was amalgamated with the Board of Stamps and Taxes to form the Board of Commissioners of Inland Revenue. In 1909, (8 Edward VII c. 16) responsibility for excise duties was transferred from the Inland Revenue to the Board of Customs, which was renamed the Board of Customs and Excise.

The local work of the Boards of Customs and Excise was carried out by staff stationed in customs outposts or excise districts. Although in many instances officials from both Boards were stationed in the same locations, the administrative structures of the two Boards were not identical. The Customs Board established outposts which reported directly to the Board in either Edinburgh or London, and which in some cases had supervisory responsibility for subordinate ports or creeks. Excise was administered by local collections which were sub-divided into districts and divisions. Although the districts and divisions were subordinate to the collection, in many instances they also communicated directly with the Board in Edinburgh or London.

In addition to customs and excise work, local officers frequently maintained shipping registers and sea fishing boat registers on behalf of the Registrar-General of Seamen and Shipping. Local officers were often appointed Receivers of Wrecks and also carried out work on behalf of the Royal Naval Reserve.

Customs and Excise records are held in the Shetland Archives under charge and superintendence of the Keeper of the Records of Scotland.

Custodial history

The outpost and district records for Lerwick were transferred in June 1983 to the Archivist, Shetland Islands Council, 44 King Harald Street, Lerwick, Shetland.

Series CE85/2: Board to Collector.

Date: 1780-1924 (creation)

Scope and content: This series comprises two types of communications (i) general orders addressed by the Board to all collections and (ii) particular correspondence addressed by the Board to individual ports. Sometimes these two types of correspondence were entered in separate series of letter books. But it was a not uncommon practice to mix both together and the titles of the various series 'Boards Orders', 'Board's General Orders', 'Board's Letters', 'General Letters', etc give no reliable indication of the character of the material. In addition it frequently occurs that no master set of Board's Orders was maintained in a port - each official keeping sets of those Orders which concerned his own particular functions. All volumes containing particular material addressed by the Board to a port have been retained and general material has been retained in all cases where it is not substantially duplicated in other series.
